

Who are we and what do we do?

Transcomm UK Ltd, part of the BT Group, owns and operates the UK Mobitex network for mission critical wireless data solutions. The Transcomm Network is a proven, reliable and cost-efficient network for wireless data applications that require levels of reliability and integrity not available from consumer-oriented voice-centric mobile phone networks. The network is a packet switched wireless data network built specifically for data covering over 95% (for standard mobile connectivity) of the UK population and delivering over 99.9% network availability.

Transcomm provides a wide range of wireless data applications to help organisations run their operations more profitably and efficiently – making up-to-the minute information available whenever and wherever it is needed, securely and reliably. End-to-end solutions are made possible via Transcomm's solution set that includes host wireless products, remote wireless products and its Grapevine services. Transcomm's Grapevine services enable enhanced WAP browsing and email services from a portable handheld unit linked to the Transcomm Network.

Transcomm's solutions are brought together under its Professional Services group which manages the roll out of complete wireless data initiatives through project management services, ongoing support, remotely configured modems, providing vehicle installations as well as training services.

Who do we do it for?

Transcomm operates in the business to business market and has specialised experience with wireless data solutions for the Emergency Services, Local Authorities, Machine-to-machine (M2M), Field Service and Transport Market Sectors.

With regards to the public sector, the Transcomm Network is used by over 50% of the police forces, 8 of the UK's ambulance services and 7 fire services. Seen as a complementary technology and not a replacement for voice radio, the introduction of mobile data services for the emergency services means a more efficient deployment of resources, rapid response to incidents and an increase in officer effectiveness.
